

SARAH: A Week in the Life of a Combined Arts Fresher

Time:	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday	Sunday
Morning	Honestly? Sleeping... Or using this time to get back from a weekend trip home.	9-10am: Lecture for Intro. to Novel 10-11am: Tutorial (every few weeks) for Poetry	Sleep OR 10-11am: Tutorial for The Heroic Age (every few weeks)	9-11am: Yes, my first (and only) two hour lecture, for Intro. to Modern Art	10-11am: Lecture for Beauty & the Beast (it's a real module, I swear)	This day...	Occasional Sunday morning shift at work.
Afternoon	2-3pm: Lecture for The Heroic Age 4-5pm: Tutorial for Novel (every few weeks)	Much the same as Sheldon, I have an allocated laundry time – Tuesday afternoons! OR 4-5pm: Tutorial for Perspectives on Human Nature (every few weeks)... sigh	12-1pm: Lecture for Intro. to Poetry Usually decide to go to Tesco around this time, or to just chill.	11-Noon: Lecture for Perspectives on Human Nature... sigh Perhaps it's time to catch the afternoon show of Jeremy Kyle and have a brew..?	11-Noon: Tutorial for Beauty & the Beast (every other week) Nothing in particular...shopping, reading, essaying, sleeping, loitering...anything goes.	...has absolutely...	Either spend the day chilling with friends or baking for... 5-6pm: Pudding Society. Cake, guys. Cake.
Evening	If I'm feeling particularly studious; subject reading/going over lecture notes. If not; generally chilling/making badass formal costumes.	Sometime between 5-6.30pm: Mentor Night - free food...do you need any more persuasion??	Chill some more? Or, if it's close to deadlines/exams, maybe actually get some work done...	4.30-9.30pm: My usual Mentor Night shift at work in Butler kitchens.	BUTLER LIVE! – Great night of live music in Butler bar. Highly recommended ...OR...	...no plans...	JCR Meeting in the bar or just the bar quiz depending which week it is.
Night	FORMAL TIME!	7.30 – 9.30pm: Creative Writing Society. 9.30 onwards: C.W.S. drinking time...	FISHTANK! Butler's Rock & Alt. Society's weekly event of awesomeness.	9.30pm onwards: Either find people and chill in the bar/watch some movies/go out, etc.	FULL COLLAPSE! Uni. Rock Soc. event every other week in Hild Bede's undercroft. Very much looked forward to!	...whatsoever.	DISNEY SOC. No specific time for this, but Sunday nights are often good Disney film watching times...

SAJAN: A Week in the Life of a History Fresher

	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday	Sunday
Morning	Wake up at 9, ready to leave at 10:30. Get the bus to the town with another history student for a lecture at 11, the bus arrives literally right outside the lecture hall!	Treat myself to a lazy morning despite doing nothing to deserve it. Make a cheese and ham toastie and spend the morning on BBC Iplayer/ 4od.	Free day! There is no rush to get out of bed. Eventually though I'd perhaps go to the library and spend a few hours planning an essay.	My busiest day – 3 whole contact hours! Life is good. Get the bus to my 11am lecture. Stay in town and eat lunch in a cafe before my 1pm lecture.	Another free day! But this time used a bit better. Get up and work out a basic essay structure, with paragraphs decided before heading down to the library at 12.	Wake up early 1 to do a bit of shopping at the Durham indoor market. Get back to college to unpack the Tesco delivery with the rest of the flat at around 12.	Use the morning to plan work for the coming week to make sure I can all the deadlines. Spend a few hours watching TV before doing any work.
Afternoon	Using the same bus ticket, get back to college for a few of hours in the bar before another lecture at 2. Stay in town at 3 for shopping.	Just one afternoon lecture at 2. Go with a friend and bus back in time for a relaxing afternoon in the bar before my 5pm lecture.	Get work done early, leaving an afternoon free. Most sports train on Wednesday. Go to town for lunch with some friends from other colleges.	Go to the library for some essay reading. Nothing too stressful, just getting it done between lectures. Go straight from there to the last lecture at 5.	Do library reading for the essay. Meet a friend and take a joint break with them to get lunch at the New Inn pub across the road.	Football afternoon in the bar as a treat for yesterday's work. Order a sandwich with every filling at the bar, because I can.	Get all of (or nearly all of) my seminar reading done for the week, going to the library. A lot of history articles are online – very handy!
Evening	Get back from town at around 5 and spend about half an hour in the bar playing pool. Do reading for my Thursday seminar so I have less work for the rest of the week.	Get back from my 5pm lecture and go to the flat to work out plans for the evening/night. Make a full English breakfast for dinner because I can.	Get the flat together for a Tesco order, splitting the delivery cost. Order Dominoes which seems to always be half price... not complaining.	Go back to college and get Mentor night food! It's a great way of meeting people. Go back to the flat and spend a few hours in the kitchen. Invite other flats too.	Get back to College for 5pm, having planned a full essay. Have dinner in the bar before making the plan into an A tough day, but they are mercifully rare.	Stay in the bar for the rest of the evening, talking to people, playing pool/darts and generally loving life. Get to the flat a bit early to sort out plans for the evening!	Go to the bar once I've done my work and get dinner. That feast is followed by either a Quiz or JCR meeting. Sunday evenings are all about the bar.
Night	Monday isn't really a going out night for Butler, so stay in and have a night in the bar. It's an easy way of socialising.	Studio Tuesday, 50p entry at a Durham club. Before going out we get together with other flats.	Loveshack Wednesday. It's like a must for Butler first years. By far the most popular night out for our year.	Gangster DJ at Studio! After a ridiculous amount of cheese this is perfect if you want to forget One Direction.	Quiet night in after the last 3 nights. Probably a film in the flat for a chilled evening.	A Durham tradition is going on college bar crawls. Most Saturdays we go on a social ending up in a club.	The early night features a pool match. After that I have a quiet evening, with an inter-flat Fifa tournament.

SIAN: A Week in the Life of a Geography Fresher

Time:	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday	Sunday
Morning	2hr Physical Geog lecture to kick-start the week. Wonder why this module has 2hr lectures but all the others are two 1hr ones...	Casually stroll in for the IGR lecture at 10am, laughing at all the people who take Cities and had to be in at 9am.	Spend morning justifying why there is definitely not time to do work before my 11am lecture, so sleep and watch iPlayer in bed.	Nice relaxing lie-in. Geographers love their days off, there's usually at least one. No activity to report.	Get up early to plan the essay as I got distracted last night. Tell self to be more organised next time.	There's such thing as a Saturday morning?...	Wake up very late after not setting an alarm. Lie in bed debating if the 1pm kick-off is worth getting up for...
Afternoon	Massive gap between 10am and 5pm lectures – too long to stay on Science Site, too short to start work...	Pop back to Butler in the gap, with the intention to read. Suddenly tidying my room seems really appealing...	Environment & Society finishes at 12pm, run back, grab a bite to eat and get dressed for Football training.	Still enjoying the day off. Should do some lecture reading, instead watch pointless Youtube videos.	Sit in optional Geology module doing a 2-page summative report. Including refs & diagrams. Win.	Go to the Bar and get my favourite Chicken Mayo sandwich from the Coffee Shop. Enjoy being lazy.	Spend the entire afternoon in Butler Bar watching the football. Laugh at Spurs losing.
Evening	Wanted to spend ages getting ready for the Formal, instead in a mad rush thanks to my 5.00 lecture. Cheers Human Geog!	4pm IGR practical in a dingy computer room. At least they're easy – finish in half the time and spend rest chatting to Geography pals.	Have the most pointless shower ever after Football, only to go to Dance at 7pm and get sweaty again. Have another shower.	Regret spending the noon watching pointless Youtube videos when I remember the essay to do tomorrow.	Deliberately walk through Bar on way home hoping someone will be in to distract me. There is, so I play Darts all evening.	Continue to sit in the Bar being lazy. Whinge when someone asks for Dr Who to be put on, but still don't leave. Bar = home	Remain in the Bar, desperately try to cram for tutorial I forgot I have tomorrow. Get distracted by Quiz.
Night	Look around and hope I'm not being judged too much for not eating any of my veg at the Formal. Get overly excited for dessert.	STUDIO TUESDAY! Us oldies still love it, even if the younger ones prefer Loveshack these days (and it's not 50p anymore)...	Sulk as I have a day off tomorrow but nobody in my year ever goes on a Wednesday. Maybe tag along with some Freshers to Loveshack anyway.	Drag mattresses, pillows and blankets into the kitchen for a girly film night. Enjoy flatmate's baking as I can't cook.	Friday night is Klute night –enjoy Quaddies and the only nightclub that ever plays McFly without me requesting it.	Sit and watch Open Mic Night whilst secretly wishing I played guitar so I could get up and belt out Taylor Swift.	Late-night reading for said tutorial. Decide the keen girl in the group will answer all the questions anyway so give up.

MATT: A Week in the Life of a Physics Fresher

Time:	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday	Sunday
Morning	Lectures all morning, some lovely Maths at 9am to get the week rolling.	9am Maths tutorial, followed by several hours of Physics lectures.	11am Lecture is a great chance to recover from last night. Followed by Astronomy this is your chilled out morning.	You guessed it, more lectures. 9am Astronomy, a perfect chance to sleep off last night's antics.	9am Maths, 10am free period in the library followed by 11am Physics. Get lots done in your refreshed state	Either sleep in or a late morning jog, a chance to recuperate after a week full of lectures.	Pancake day! Make lots, share them – makes you very popular! Go to Badminton training to work them off!
Afternoon	3 hour lab session. Time to put those theories to the test and use dangerous equipment!	A free afternoon to start getting those weekly problems done. Alternatively hit the gym or hang out in the bar.	Lecture free. A good time to restock the fridge, burn some calories with sport, or attend one of the various societies.	2pm finish lectures, back to college to meet up with other physicists and try to solve those problems!	With a 5pm lecture looming this time is nicely used by finishing any work or reading over the week's lectures.	Flat outing, either for food or for fancy dress etc. The gym is always an option!	The time left to finish off those pesky weekly problems that still haven't been finished.
Evening	After a long day it's time to relax and eat comfort food you've prepared over the weekend, or nap before a formal.	5-6pm Maths Tutorial, walking home in the dark is never less fun.	Brag to your flat about the lack of lectures you've had today, it's the only day you will be able to do so!	An evening off to cook lots of food, bake some sugary treats or do some background reading.	5-6pm Maths lecture. Yes, the timetable planner is an evil person! Then back for a quick dinner.	Cook a prestigious meal using the fresh ingredients picked up from the morning.	JCR Meeting and Sunday Quiz, nearly all of Butler turn out so not a night to miss!
Night	Get suited up, or face painted depending on the formal theme!	Mentor night: a free meal and chat to your mentor! Studio Tuesdays, 50p entry, to take your mind off those equations!	Get limbered up ready for Loveshack Wednesdays. Take bets which flat member you will be carrying home.	After two previous nights out its time to kick back and watch some films with the flat.	A night for the bar, attending Butler Live or other various events around college.	Go to one of the various clubs in Durham, hit a few cocktail bars, or have a relaxing night with film or games.	Early night, or a very late one depending on how challenging your tutorial problems are for the following week!
